25,000 Police To Protect Ike While In Tokyo

Motorcycle Cops Hold Rehearsal

TOKYO, (AP)—Sharply increased protective measures—including a security force of 25,000 police—were reported in the works Sunday to guard President Eisenhower from the threat of massive leftist demonstrations during his Japanese visit.

The newspaper Japan Times said an original plan calling for the mobilization of 15,000 security police was scrapped because of the mobbing of White House press secretary James C. Hagerty in Tokyo last Friday. It said the new plans call for deploying 25,000 police to protect Eisenhower.

Government officials and police declined to comment on the report but there has been strong criticism of police failure to curb the violent demonstrations that have surged through Tokyo and other parts of Japan.

Tokyo's motorcycle police spent several hours Sunday rehearsing escort duties for the Eisenhower arrival June 19.

The English language Japan Times said 12,000 police will be lined along the 15-mile route from Tokyo's Haneda Airport to the Imperial Palace, with an additional 10,000 stationed at major traffic junctions.

Johnson Raps Administration "Drift Policy"

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas accused the Eisenhower administration Sunday of following a "policy of drift" in military and foreign affairs.

Johnson, one of the leading contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination, proposed the launching of a world peace program. He said the United States should challenge the Soviet Union to participate in peaceful advancement of the world.

To do this he said the country needs new leadership.

"First of all," he said, "I don't approve of our foreign policy. I think it's been a policy of drift."

"It has been a policy that has needed new stimulus for eight years. I think we must be more positive and aggressive in our quest for peace and in our attempt to understand the peoples of other lands."

"Unless we evolve some new and more effective policy for Asia, we are going to be in serious trouble. We can see on the horizon the possibility of Red China taking over all of Asia. This will be a dark day for America and the rest of the free world."

Johnson added he thinks "we have a drift not only in foreign policy but in our defense structure."

"I believe there is a great deal of incompetence that has been built in our defense structure during the last eight years," he said. "I don't think we're going far enough fast enough."

Johnson presented his views in two taped television programs. On one he appeared with Sen. George A. Smathers (D-Fla.) for Florida stations. The other was recorded with Sen. Kenneth B. Keating (R-NY) for New York stations.

Cuban Peasant Patrol Nabs Anti-Castro Leader

HAVANA (AP) — An ex-army captain who tried to stir up a revolt against Prime Minister Fidel Castro in the Prime Minister's old revolutionary stamping grounds is reported in the hands of Cuban military authorities Sunday.

A five-man peasant patrol flushed insurgent Manuel Beaton out of hiding in the rugged Sierra Maestra and captured him at dawn Friday, army headquarters said Saturday night.

Beaton carried a pistol, but no shots were fired when the peasant militiamen closed in on him in La Bayamita, about 40 miles west of Santiago. Army officials declined to give further details.

The announcement said Beaton was alone when picked up and his capture completed the round-

23,000-Mile Tour Poses Many Perils

Ike Declares He Cannot Shirk His Responsibility

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower took off on a dangerous Far Eastern trip Sunday in the expressed hope of furthering world peace.

The President said he had decided against postponing or canceling his trip, despite mob demonstrations in Japan, because of his "compelling responsibility" as a free world leader.

He said he was going ahead "in the devout hope that I can help further, even a little" the cause of peace.

In a departure message to the American people, Eisenhower explained why he is going on with his two-week, 23,000-mile tour in the face of violent, Communist-backed uprisings in Tokyo against his coming.

The President said he had weighed and rejected publicly expressed warnings, by some leading congressmen and others, that he should put off the trip which will take him to the Philippines, Formosa, and Korea as well as Japan.

"We should not permit unpleasant incidents and sporadic turmoil, inspired by misled or hostile agents, to dim for us the concrete and gratifying results" of travels abroad by U.S. leaders, he said.

Ike Waves Cheery Goodbye

Eisenhower waved a cheery goodbye to a cluster of early-rising well-wishers at Andrews Air Force Base, then stepped aboard an orange and silver Air Force jet transport for a 7½-hour flight to Anchorage, his stepping-off point for the Far East.

This may be Eisenhower's last overseas journey as chief executive. It also poses more perils than any of the others since he began his multi-continent visits to promote friendship toward America and soften international problems.

The possible physical dangers to the 69-year-old President were dramatically etched in Tokyo Friday in the mob action against his press secretary, James C. Hagerty.

Communist-Socialist mass demonstrations against the visit continued over the weekend. U.S. Ambassador Douglas MacArthur II brought pressure on Japanese Prime Minister Nobusuke Kishi to assure Eisenhower's safety during his June 19-23 stay in Japan.

Diplomatically, Eisenhower risked as U.S. chief of state a worldwide loss of American prestige if his journey did not go well.

No Alternative

But Washington policymakers decided he had no alternative but to go ahead. To back out now would hand the Communists a great propaganda victory, shake U.S. relations with Asiatic allies, probably bring about the downfall of the friendly Kishi regime in Tokyo and with it the pending U.S.-Japanese security treaty.

The President himself displayed no outward misgivings in his smiling farewells to the handful of officials who went to the airport to wish him Godspeed.

Attired in a dark gray business suit and dark blue tie, Eisenhower shook hands with Cabinet members and with diplomats from the countries he is en route to visit.

He chatted briefly but solemnly with Vice President Richard M. Nixon, who arrived almost too late for the sendoff. He talked alone also with Secretary of State Christian A. Herter before taking

'Not Candidate' Adlai Insists In 'Clarification'

CHICAGO (AP)—Adlai E. Stevenson said Sunday, "I am not a candidate."

The Democratic presidential nominee of 1952 and 1956 issued a brief statement amplifying an earlier one he said was issued to clarify his status.

Apparently he took issue with an interpretation placed by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt on a telegraphed statement he addressed to her Saturday.

Mrs. Roosevelt's comment on Stevenson's telegram was: "From this statement, I think you will find it clear that Mr. Stevenson is a candidate, since there is a sizable number of people who are asking him to accept the responsibility of being the candidate for the Democratic party in the next convention."

Stevenson made this statement Sunday:

"My message to Mrs. Roosevelt speaks for itself. I reiterated the position I have taken for several years—that I will not seek the nomination for president by the Democratic convention."

"Therefore, I am not a candidate."

Stevenson's statement to Mrs. Roosevelt was interpreted by her as meaning Stevenson is a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination. Stevenson already had declared publicly he would not be a "draft evader" if his party demanded he run for president again.

Last week in her syndicated column, "My Day," Mrs. Roosevelt came out for a Stevenson-Kennedy ticket — a ticket she said would be the strongest the Democrats could field against Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

She asked Stevenson to clarify his position in that regard.

Wired Stevenson: "I am deeply affected by what you have said of me, but I do confess that your request that I 'clarify my position' presents some difficulty. I realize that under present circumstances even a restatement of what has been said before may be given unintended and unwarranted interpretation."

"I have, as you know, taken no part in presidential politics for the past three years. And I do not now intend to try to influence the nomination in any way by 'endorsing' anyone, or trying to 'stop' anyone, or seeking it myself."

"I have not made and will not make any 'deals' with anyone."

"I am not, as you recognize in your statement, a 'declared candidate.' This leaves only the question, again in your terms, of 'shirking public responsibility.'"

"I have declined repeatedly to comment on questions about a 'draft.' I think I have made it clear in my public life, however, that I will serve my country and my party whenever called upon."

"I believe the Democratic convention will select a man fully competent to lead the country."

Congress Abandons Hope Of Closing Up Shop Before July 11

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders scanned their calendar of unfinished business Sunday and gave up any hope of adjourning by July 4.

They began to wonder if Congress can close up shop before July 11, when the national political conventions start with the Democratic meeting in Los Angeles. The spectre of a post-convention session is haunting legislators anxious to go home and campaign for re-election.

Because of the leisurely pace set during the past 5½ months, Congress faces the unpleasant prospect of longer daily sessions and fewer prolonged weekend holidays between now and adjournment.

The official "Status of Major Legislation, Second Session," lists only six legislative bills on which action has been taken since the second session of the 86th Congress convened last January. Two of these have become law and two were vetoed. The other two are hung up on the hooks of controversy.

The official listing shows enactment of a new civil rights bill and a measure extending the mutual assistance — foreign aid — program but not financing it.

The vetoed bills called for sewage treatment grants and for federal help for depressed areas.

The two measures stymied because Senate and House can't see eye to eye provide for aid for school construction and for emergency financing for home building.

The House has passed 13 of the 14 regular annual appropriations bills, but only five of them have cleared the Senate. A stopgap bill providing temporary financing for federal agencies whose new funds are not approved by July 1 will be considered late this month.

Senate leaders hope to give a big push this week to some of the appropriations bills backed up in that body.

The Senate also may get around to votes on ratification of the U.S.-Japan mutual security pact which does not require House action, and on a bill repealing the requirement that college students seeking government loans must submit a loyalty oath.

Most of the passengers booked on canceled flights are being accommodated by other airlines, the spokesman added.

At present, the airline said, there were no flight operations between New York and Miami, Fla., and only a few flights to and from Boston. The spokesman said most of the pilots are failing to show up in Miami Beach and Boston.

The strike began midnight Friday because of pilots' objection to a new Federal Aviation Agency regulation which directs that FAA flight inspectors sit directly behind the captain on jet flights. The pilots claim this practice unsafe because the inspector displaces one of the copilots.

The company called the action of the pilots an unlawful strike and the pilots say it is a temporary work stoppage.

Spanish Archbishop Proclaimed Saint

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Juan de Ribera, a Spanish Roman Catholic archbishop who died at Valencia in 1611, was canonized Sunday in a ceremony at St. Peter's Basilica.

A builder of churches and schools and founder of the College of Corpus Christi, de Ribera was the fourth person to be proclaimed a saint by Pope John XXIII.

'Rocky' Would Support Nixon If Nominated

NEW YORK (AP)—Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller said Sunday night he would support Vice President Nixon if he wins the Republican presidential nomination, but it will be difficult to carry New York state unless Nixon speaks out on vital issues.

The Republican governor repeated earlier statements that he would support whatever candidates are nominated at the GOP convention. Asked about Nixon, he answered:

"I will support him."

Rockefeller insisted on the NBC-TV program, "Meet the Press," that his recent critical statement concerning Nixon and administration policies was made to insure that there would be adequate debate of national issues before the GOP convention.

Producer Lawrence E. Spivak asked: "Governor, in December of last year when you withdrew you said this, and I quote: 'I am not and shall not be a candidate for nomination for the presidency. This decision is definite and final.' There have been rumors now that there's been a change. Does that statement still stand?"

"It does," said Rockefeller. He denied he was trying to stop the nomination of Nixon, saying he was interested in the vitality of the party.

This vitality, he said, could best be served by a debate of national issues prior to the convention.

He said he did not speak out prior to the summit conference in deference to its importance and added that no debate would be feasible following the selection of a candidate when the party must present a united front.

"I think I'm doing the greatest service to the Republican party that I can by raising these issues," Rockefeller said when asked, in view of his noncandidate statements and his criticism, "Are you a Republican?"

He referred to talk of his becoming the GOP vice-presidential candidate as a "dead issue."

Anchorage Crowds Hail Eisenhower

Chief Executive Calls 49th State Bridge To Asia

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — President Eisenhower arrived in sun-soaked Alaska Sunday and called the 49th state "no longer an arctic frontier" but a bridge to Asia whose people have demonstrated "what free men and women can accomplish."

The President's big jet transport plane landed at Elmendorf Air Force Base at 10:10 a.m. after a nonstop flight from Washington.

In a 10-minute address of greeting, Eisenhower made no direct reference to the 15-day Far East goodwill mission, on which he departs from here early Monday. Nor did he refer to the Tokyo demonstrations against his visit to Japan.

But Democratic Gov. William A. Egan of Alaska told the President the prayers of the nation accompanied him on the 23,000-mile trip on which he will arrive at Tokyo June 19.

Earlier in the day, however, before leaving Washington, the President said the purpose of his mission was "to improve the climate of international understanding."

Temperature 56 Degrees

"Never, I believe, in the history of international affairs, has there been so massive a program of communications between government officials and between peoples. We should not let unpleasant incidents and sporadic turmoil, inspired by misled or hostile agents, to dim for us the concrete and gratifying results. They have been to the great profit and to the great good of the entire world."

An estimated 4,000 Alaskans greeted Eisenhower and his party at the Air Force base, six miles from downtown Anchorage.

The temperature was 56 degrees and the President doffed his felt hat to the bright sun as he alighted from the plane to shake hands with Gov. Egan and Lt. Gen. Frank A. Armstrong, commander in chief of Alaska armed forces. Some clouds rimmed the snow-capped Chugach Mountain behind Anchorage, Alaska's largest city.

"My father," the President told the crowd, "was a growing boy when the Russian flag flew over Alaska. It never entered my head that as President of the United States I would someday urgently recommend statehood for Alaska and welcome it into the union."

Chats With Eskimo Girls

Eisenhower called his sweeping flight from Washington, over some of Alaska's rugged expanses, "an index to North American growth in my lifetime."

Among the greeters who welcomed the President were two little Eskimo girls, Helen and Stella Mosquito of Anchorage, who were in the reception line to present a bouquet of roses to Mrs. John Eisenhower, the President's daughter-in-law.

The President bent low over the dark-eyed youngsters and chatted with them for a few moments. After the formal exchange of greetings between the President and the governor, Eisenhower returned to chat with the girls a second time.

Eisenhower, in his opening remarks, noted that this was his first visit to Alaska since it became the 49th state. He previously had been here, however, as an Army general.

Crowds estimated at between 30,000 and 35,000 lined downtown Anchorage streets as the President rode in a motorcade through the city.

The crowds were not particularly demonstrative, but the color-

Japanese Reds Seen Controlling Anti-Pact Drive

TOKYO (AP)—A high Japanese political source said Monday the Communist party has seized control of the campaign against the U.S.-Japanese military alliance and the visit of President Eisenhower to Japan.

"Socialist Chairman Inejiro Asanuma is very worried," the source said. "The Communist party has recently changed its tactics and is advocating violence. We are not sure what they plan."

The Socialist and Communist parties and the big Red-tinted Sohyo Labor Federation are the leading organizations in the "People's Council against the U.S.-Japan Security Treaty." The Council has directed the bitter opposition to the treaty, the Kishi government and the Eisenhower visit.

Former Met Tenor Dies

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Armand Tokatyan, former Metropolitan Opera Co. tenor, died of a heart attack Sunday at the age of 64.

He appeared at the Metropolitan during 18 seasons from 1922 to 1946 and sang many of the roles made famous by the late Enrico Caruso in "Carmen," "La Boheme," "Il Trovatore," "Rigoletto" and "La Traviata."

He had lived quietly in Pasadena for the past eight years, devoting most of his time to coaching young singers.

Tokatyan was to have been the guest of honor Sunday at an Opera Society fete in nearby San Bernardino. He was stricken early in the day and taken to a hospital, where he died. He had suffered a heart attack last summer but friends said he appeared in good health recently.

Of Armenian descent, Tokatyan was born in Alexandria, Egypt, and made his opera debut in 1921 in Milan, Italy, singing the tenor role in Puccini's "Manon Lescaut." He later became identified with the leading roles in Puccini operas.

Cuban Peasant Patrol Nabs Anti-Castro Leader

HAVANA (AP)—An ex-army captain who tried to stir up a revolt against Prime Minister Fidel Castro in the Prime Minister's old revolutionary stamping grounds is reported in the hands of Cuban military authorities Sunday.

A five-man peasant patrol flushed insurgent Manuel Beaton out of hiding in the rugged Sierra Maestra and captured him at dawn Friday, army headquarters said Saturday night.

Beaton carried a pistol, but no shots were fired when the peasant militiamen closed in on him in La Bayamita, about 40 miles west of Santiago. Army officials declined to give further details.

The announcement said Beaton was alone when picked up and his capture completed the roundup of 16 insurgents who had eluded pursuers for months in the rugged wastes of the Sierras. The army said Beaton will be tried by a military tribunal which could give him the death sentence.

The capture report gave a tremendous propaganda boost to Castro's "Peoples army"—a growing network of armed civilian militia.

Castro had led a large number of troops into the mountains last month in unsuccessful pursuit of Beaton.

The capture signals an end to the most bothersome—or at least the most publicized—faction of armed opposition to Castro. There are persistent reports, however, of other small rebel bands operating in Camaguey and Las Villas provinces.

Congress Abandons Hope Of Closing Up Shop Before July 11

WASHINGTON (AP)—Congress faces the unpleasant prospect of longer daily sessions and fewer prolonged weekend holidays between now and adjournment.

The official "Status of Major Legislation, Second Session," lists only six legislative bills on which action has been taken since the second session of the 86th Congress convened last January. Two of these have become law and two were vetoed. The other two were hung up on the hooks of controversy.

Strike Curtails Airline Flights

NEW YORK (AP)—Eastern Airlines reported about one-third of its flight operations at the three metropolitan area airports had been canceled between midnight and noon Sunday because of the pilots' strike.

An airline spokesman said that, during the period, it had operated 53 flights out of Idlewild, LaGuardia and Newark, N.J., airports, and canceled 29 flights. The airline said a similar number of flight arrivals had been canceled during the same period.

Most of the passengers booked on canceled flights are being accommodated by other airlines, the spokesman added.

At present, the airline said, there were no flight operations between New York and Miami, Fla., and only a few flights to and from Boston. The spokesman said most of the pilots are failing to show up in Miami Beach and Boston.

The strike began midnight Friday because of pilots' objection to a new Federal Aviation Agency regulation which directs that FAA flight inspectors sit directly behind the captain on jet flights. The pilots claim this practice unsafe because the inspector displaces one of the copilots.

The company called the action of the pilots an unlawful strike and the pilots say it is a temporary work stoppage.

Extra Funds Seen Giving U.S. Sky Spy Year Sooner

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senate funds to speed the Samos satellite project were added in a last minute move by the full Appropriations Committee. A subcommittee had denied specific amounts by authorized transfer of up to 150 million dollars if there is a scientific breakthrough.

Senate experts said two other emergency funds—one for 150 million dollars cash and another for an equal transfer authority—also are available for pushing the military satellites.

Before these extra funds and authority were added, the big money bill carried some 333 million dollars for three military satellite research projects. The other two are the Discoverer—which has been put into orbit on test launches—and the Midas, planned to report back instantly any ballistic missile launchings detected by its infrared sensors.

Anchorage Crowds Hail Eisenhower

Chief Executive Calls 49th State Bridge To Asia

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)—President Eisenhower arrived in sun-soaked Alaska Sunday and called the 49th state "no longer an arctic frontier" but a bridge to Asia whose people have demonstrated "what free men and women can accomplish."

The President's big jet transport plane landed at Elmendorf Air Force Base at 10:10 a.m. after a nonstop flight from Washington.

In a 10-minute address of greeting, Eisenhower made no direct reference to the 15-day Far East goodwill mission, on which he departs from here early Monday. Nor did he refer to the Tokyo demonstrations against his visit to Japan.

But Democratic Gov. William A. Egan of Alaska told the President the prayers of the nation accompanied him on the 23,000-mile trip on which he will arrive at Tokyo June 19.

Earlier in the day, however, before leaving Washington, the President said the purpose of his mission was "to improve the climate of international understanding."

Temperature 56 Degrees

"Never, I believe, in the history of international affairs, has there been so massive a program of communications between government officials and between peoples. We should not let unpleasant incidents and sporadic turmoil, inspired by misled or hostile agents, to dim for us the concrete and gratifying results. They have been to the great profit and to the great good of the entire world."

An estimated 4,000 Alaskans greeted Eisenhower and his party at the Air Force base, six miles from downtown Anchorage.

The temperature was 56 degrees and the President doffed his felt hat to the bright sun as he alighted from the plane to shake hands with Gov. Egan and Lt. Gen. Frank A. Armstrong, commander in chief of Alaska armed forces. Some clouds rimmed the snow-capped Chugach Mountain behind Anchorage, Alaska's largest city.

"My father," the President told the crowd, "was a growing boy when the Russian flag flew over Alaska. It never entered my head that as President of the United States I would someday urgently recommend statehood for Alaska and welcome it into the union."

Chats With Eskimo Girls

Eisenhower called his sweeping flight from Washington, over some of Alaska's rugged expanses, "an index to North American growth in my lifetime."

Among the greeters who welcomed the President were two little Eskimo girls, Helen and Stella Mosquito of Anchorage, who were in the reception line to present a bouquet of roses to Mrs. John Eisenhower, the President's daughter-in-law.

The President bent low over the dark-eyed youngsters and chatted with them for a few moments. After the formal exchange of greetings between the President and the governor, Eisenhower returned to chat with the girls a second time.

Eisenhower, in his opening remarks, noted that this was his first visit to Alaska since it became the 49th state. He previously had been here, however, as an Army general.

Crowds estimated at between 30,000 and 35,000 lined downtown Anchorage streets as the President rode in a motorcade through the city.

The crowds were not particularly demonstrative, but the color-

Coverup Of South Africa "Horror Story" Charged

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Press reports Sunday claimed South Africa's white supremacy government is hiding the true dimensions of a "horror story" that developed when police clashed with 400 Negro demonstrators in Pondoland last Monday.

At least three newspapers said police bullets killed 29 Negroes and injured 50 in the troubled African reserve bordering Cape Province and Natal. The Ministry of Justice insists only six were killed. It claimed police fired in self-defense and blamed the unrest on the outlawed African National Congress.

Reporters for the papers said they had trouble getting into the area and that "whites living there say openly they have been told by the authorities to keep their mouths shut."

The reporters said the demonstration was the biggest of a series staged to protest the government's plan to raze the Negroes through appointment of chiefs and headmen. Some of the opposition took the form of attacks on huts and kraals—native enclosures. Johannesburg Sunday Times reported a heavy force of armed police, backed by armored cars and aircraft, have been assigned to the area to maintain order.

Two accounts of Monday's clash attributed to eyewitnesses, were published Sunday in the Durban Tribune and the Johannesburg Golden City Post, an African weekly. Both differed sharply from the official version given by Justice Minister Francois Erasmus.

The Tribune said more than 400 Negroes had assembled when a Harvard aircraft dive-bombed them with tear gas bombs.

"The natives are said to have fired back at the plane (more than 6,000 licensed firearms are owned by natives in the territory)."

"Helicopters then reportedly landed men armed with Sten guns, who stepped out and fired at the natives."

The Golden City Post quoted "people living on the spot" for estimates of dead ranging to 29. "There are still many natives hiding and police with aircraft and armored cars are trying to round up the wounded," it added.

Turk Military Group Assumes Political Power

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — A committee of 38 military officers Sunday night officially became the supreme political power in Turkey.

The military men took over under terms of a new provisional constitution drawn up by the military junta which ousted Premier Adnan Menderes.

The new constitution was announced by members of the National Unity Committee, a body of 38 officers of the Turkish army, navy and air force who organized the rebellion against Menderes. They now directly control the temporary Turkish government of President Cemal Gursel, an army general.

The committee said the new constitution is temporary and is intended to last only until new elections can be held in Turkey and a new legislature put in operation.

No date for elections was mentioned.

The provisional constitution said:

"The National Unity Committee will serve until a new assembly is elected."

"Executive power will be exercised by the government which already has been formed by the National Unity Committee. The committee has the right to dismiss and name government ministers."

"Turkey continues to be a republic for the transition period and amendments to this provision cannot even be proposed."

The committee disclosed that a so-called high investigation committee has been set up to probe responsibility of former government officials for crimes which may have been committed against the state during the 10-year Menderes regime.

Basically the provisions of the temporary constitution held no major surprises. But they clearly underscored the dominance of the National Unity Committee, made up mostly of colonels and majors, in the current Turkish political situation.

Cycle Ride Fatal To Stock Car Racer

HAGERSTOWN (AP) — A man who made his living racing cars was killed Sunday when he went for a ride on a motorcycle.

State Police said 24-year-old Charles E. Florig Jr. of 1317 South 4th Street was traveling about 60 m. p. h. when he lost control of the motorcycle and it smashed into a wooden retaining wall at Hagerstown Speedway five miles north of here.

The accident happened about 3 p. m. and Florig was pronounced dead on arrival at Washington County Hospital in Hagerstown by E. W. Ditto, county medical examiner.

State Trooper Robert Stickler gave this account:

Florig was a stock car race driver who usually worked for Charles Bailey, driving his cars at the Hagerstown track and elsewhere. Florig went out to the track Sunday, although it was closed, and Bailey asked him if he would like to take a ride on the motorcycle. He was speeding around the oval when he lost control.

High Altitude Dynamite Test Explosion Planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department said Sunday it plans to explode 500 pounds of dynamite 24 miles above southern New Mexico next spring.

The balloon-launched experiment or possibly series of experiments, called Project Banshee, will permit studies of the effects of chemical explosions at high altitudes.

It also may contribute "knowledge to cope with military problems in the space and missile age," the department said in a statement.

Earlier studies have dealt with the results of nuclear explosions far above the earth.

The Project Argus detonation of three small nuclear devices more than 300 miles above the South Pacific in August and September 1958 created a doughnut-shaped shell of radiation that girdled the globe.

There had been some speculation among scientists that high-altitude nuclear bursts might be used to create neutron fields that would detonate the nuclear warheads of incoming missiles before they reached their targets. However, Project Argus was believed to have demonstrated that missiles could be shielded to prevent premature warhead triggering.

The nuclear tests used rockets as launching vehicles.

In Project Banshee the proposed quarter-ton of dynamite would be lifted 125,000 feet above the White Sands missile range by a three-million-cubic-foot balloon as tall as a 20-story building.

The explosion would be touched off by radio signal from the ground.

25,000 Police (Continued from Page 1) will take him to the Philippines, Formosa, Japan and South Korea.

Red flags and other debris of a noisy Saturday demonstration by more than 150,000 leftists against Eisenhower and Prime Minister Nobusuke Kishi had been cleared from Tokyo streets.

Tokyo newspapers were urging the Japanese people to welcome Eisenhower warmly and courteously as a chief of state, regardless of their feelings toward Kishi's government.

But a rough week apparently lay ahead. Socialists, Communists and other leftist elements scheduled a series of demonstrations in an effort to wreck the defense alliance between Japan and the United States.

The radical students federation, Zengakuren, which mobbed White House press secretary James G. Hagerty Friday, said it will mobilize 50,000 members to lay siege to Parliament from Monday night on.

A three-hour general strike and street parade are planned Wednesday, and other giant protests the following three days.

All are part of the continuing leftist campaign to block ratification of the new U.S.-Japan security treaty by forcing Kishi to resign and dissolve Parliament before the pact becomes law automatically June 19 the day Eisenhower arrives.

Crisis Building Up In Africa

LONDON (AP) — Fears spread among Westerners Sunday that the imminent independence of the Belgian Congo will spark feuds that could upset all Africa. Belgium is pledged to lower her flag in the Congo June 30.

Election by the 13 million Congolese of a National Assembly has involved 110 political parties whose divisions largely follow the rivalries of old tribal societies.

This has led some officials gloomily to predict the 900,000-square-mile country may break up into a jigsaw puzzle of conflicting states.

There has been a major flight of capital.

A food crisis is reported building up.

Many of the Congo's 113,000 white persons are leaving.

Among the neighbor states, special security precautions are being hurried just in case trouble spills over the frontiers.

Methodists End Annual Session At Westminster

WESTMINSTER, Md. (AP)—The Baltimore Annual Conference of the Methodist Church ended Sunday with appointments of ministers for the year.

The session which opened Wednesday night on the Western Maryland College campus was the 176th. Clergy and lay delegates attended from 546 churches representing about 196,000 Methodists in Maryland west of Chesapeake Bay, the District of Columbia and three counties in West Virginia's Eastern Panhandle.

Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam of Washington read the list of appointments for the last time. He will retire at the Northeastern Jurisdictional Conference in Washington June 15-19.

An ordination service preceded reading of appointments. Final day activities also included a noon dinner and a love feast in Baker Memorial Chapel preceding the morning worship service.

A lengthy report by the conference's board of education Saturday noted there are 19,925 Methodist students in schools within conference boundaries and said:

"This growing number of students presents a serious challenge and opportunity to the Baltimore Conference. The measure of commitment with which we meet the need of our students for the services of their church will be seen not only in the present generation, but also on future student generations."

The committee said the campus church is especially entrusted with reaching men and women "who mold our philosophy and literature, write our books, edit our newspapers, direct our advertising, radio and television."

A report from the board of evangelism said evangelism goes hand-in-hand with education, adding:

"Education without evangelism makes a Parisee. Evangelism without education makes fanatics."

"Excess" Wheat Penalty Is Set

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)—A marketing quota penalty rate of $1.08 per bushel on "excess" wheat of the 1960 crop has been established.

As directed by law, the rate of the marketing quota penalty is 45 per cent of the parity price per bushel of wheat as of May 1 of the calendar year in which the crop is harvested. The current parity price for wheat is $2.39 per bushel.

Growers approved marketing quotas for the 1960 wheat crop on July 23, 1959. ## Miller Named National Committeeman At Stormy Maryland GOP Convention

BALTIMORE (AP)—Maryland Republicans were solidly behind Vice President Nixon at their state convention Saturday, but they disagreed on just about everything else.

A wild floor fight marked the election of 24 national convention delegates, but the Republicans shouted approval as one man on a resolution calling for the convention to cast Maryland's 24 votes for Nixon as the party nominee for President.

The national delegation that was finally chosen elected former Rep. Edward T. Miller as the state's new national committeeman and renamed Mrs. Robert O. Bonnell as national committeewoman.

Mrs. Bonnell was a unanimous choice. Miller defeated White House speech writer Malcolm Moos 16-7, while former Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin, national committeeman for the past eight years, received one write-in vote.

The national convention delegates were elected moments earlier after a hectic floor fight, an unusual sight at a Republican convention in overwhelmingly Democratic Maryland.

The ear-splitting battle in the Lord Baltimore ballroom resulted from a "Young Turk" challenge to party leaders. The younger element got some concessions but lost the showdown.

The big fight came over election of the 10 "at large" delegates to the national convention. The other 14 were chosen in pre-convention caucuses of state convention delegates from each of the seven Maryland congressional districts.

Such party leaders as Sens. Beall and Butler, McKeldin and State GOP Chairman D. Eldred Rinehart automatically went on the "at large" list. But the name of Richard Paul Gilbert, the Baltimore Republican City Committee chairman, was left off, and that set up a howl by the young insurgents, who had seized control of the 42-member Baltimore delegation.

Eugene A. Sekulow, a Johns Hopkins University professor and a leading young Republican of the city, moved that Gilbert, listed as an alternate, be moved up to delegate in place of Albert A. Shuger, a close friend of McKeldin.

Sen. Beall, who was presiding, called for a voice vote and ruled the "nays" had it. That set off one of the noisiest, frenzied 15 minutes at a GOP conclave in recent years.

At one point, McKeldin tried to give up his place in favor of Shuger, but Beall ruled that out of order and attempted to go on with other business.

Then a majority of delegates from the Fifth (Southern Maryland) Congressional District tried to remove Frank Lillard, a former member of the House of Delegates from Prince Georges County, from the alternates-at-large list and substitute Woodrow A. Shriver, also of Prince Georges County.

On a rollcall vote, the insurgent move failed, 86-63. Then the Baltimore group was allowed a roll call on its motion, and it failed, 88-56.

But the insurgents were not through yet. Those who made the national delegation list tried to block the election of Miller as national committeeman. They proposed Moos but couldn't swing enough votes his way.

The national delegation installed Rinehart as its chairman and Sekulow as its secretary.

Sen. Hugh Scott (R-Pa.) key-noted the convention. He said the Democrats have produced "the best crop of broken-field runners in recent political history but haven't come forward with any man qualified to call signals for the United States."

He said the recent U-2 spy plane incident "revealed that the military has been gathering some remarkably accurate data on Russian military potential for several years."

Fish Boycott $550,000 'Ladder' But Biologist Still Keeps Watch

LITTLE FALLS, Md. (AP)—Fish are supposed to be swarming through the new $550,000 Snake Island Fishway on the Potomac River. They aren't.

On the contrary, Marlin E. Tagatz, Fish and Wildlife Service biologist, has been staring into the muddy Potomac waters since April 26 and hasn't spotted one.

Day after day, he rides out to the lonely island in an outboard with his lunch and camps for the day. Then he studies the water, hoping to start counting shad, rockfish, and herring. Still no fish.

The idea of the fishway was to permit migrating fish to go upriver to Great Falls to deposit their eggs. Fish and Wildlife Service officials believed this might double the supply of migratory fish in the Potomac within 10 years.

The fishway was called a waste of money by some critics even before it was built.

But the Fish and Wildlife Service officials—and Tagatz—won't give up.

They say the fish may have been discouraged by turbulence at the mouth of the fishway, or by excessive mud and silt, or they may even have lost the habit of swimming far.

Whatever the reason, the officialists predict they will find it and rectify matters.

While they theorize, Tagatz, a patient-looking, pipe-smoking man, will keep right on staring at the water.

New Look For Italian Convicts Approved

ROME (AP)—Italy's convicts are not going to look like convicts any more. The Cabinet Saturday approved a draft law, to be sent to Parliament shortly, doing away with striped uniforms, cropped haircuts and other practices designed to stamp a convict as a convict.

Justice Minister Guido Gonella said the idea is to abolish from prison life everything which is considered degrading. And prisons will be called "houses of custody."

Doctors Agree With Decision

CAMBRIDGE (AP)—The medical staff of the Cambridge Hospital stated Saturday it is "in full accord with the spirit and letter" of an arbitration board decision.

The decision announced Friday in effect declared both sides were at fault in a dispute between administration and doctors.

Dr. Albert E. Bunker, one of four ruled out of executive duties for at least 3 years, issued a statement of reaction by the doctors.

It promised that the staff "will work with concentrated effort toward carrying out their responsibilities to the citizens of Dorchester County."

Dr. Bunker has been chief of staff at the hospital where the doctors in their feuding with administration went to court and on a boycott last year.

The directors and other administrators declined statements on the arbitration settlement until after a meeting Monday night.

Automobile drivers between 45 and 50 are involved in one-fifth the number of fatal accidents that happen to teenage drivers.

ELKTON, Md. (AP)—A Pennsylvanian drowned in the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal Saturday night at the Cecil County town of Chesapeake City.

State Police said Arthur A. Duncheskie, 61, of (226 Tharpe St.) Tharpestown, Pa., and a companion, Walter G. Wood, were fishing from a 14-foot boat tied to a buoy in the canal. The wake from a passing ship overturned their boat and Wood managed to cling to it until rescued.

Duncheskie was dead on arrival at Union Hospital here.

Methodists End Annual Session At Westminster

WESTMINSTER, Md. (AP)—The Baltimore Annual Conference of the Methodist Church ended Sunday with appointments of ministers for the year.

The session which opened Wednesday night on the Western Maryland College campus was the 176th. Clergy and lay delegates attended from 546 churches representing about 196,000 Methodists in Maryland west of Chesapeake Bay, the District of Columbia and three counties in West Virginia's Eastern Panhandle.

Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam of Washington read the list of appointments for the last time. He will retire at the Northeastern Jurisdictional Conference in Washington June 15-19.

An ordination service preceded reading of appointments. Final day activities also included a noontime dinner and a love feast in Baker Memorial Chapel preceding the morning worship service.

A lengthy report by the conference's board of education Saturday noted there are 19,925 Methodist students in schools within conference boundaries and said:

"This growing number of students presents a serious challenge and opportunity to the Baltimore Conference. The measure of commitment with which we meet the need of our students for the services of their church will be seen not only in the present generation, but also on future student generations."

The committee said the campus church is especially entrusted with reaching men and women "who mold our philosophy and literature, write our books, edit our newspapers, direct our advertising, radio and television."

A report from the board of evangelism said evangelism goes hand-in-hand with education, adding:

"Education without evangelism makes Parisees. Evangelism without education makes fanatics."

"Excess" Wheat Penalty Is Set

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)—A marketing quota penalty rate of $1.08 per bushel on "excess" wheat of the 1960 crop has been established.

As directed by law, the rate of the marketing quota penalty is 45 per cent of the parity price per bushel of wheat as of May 1 of the calendar year in which the crop is harvested. The current parity price for wheat is $2.39 per bushel.

Growers approved marketing quotas for the 1960 wheat crop on July 23, 1959. When wheat marketing quotas are in effect, a farmer who does not comply with the wheat acreage allotment established for his farm is subject to a penalty on his farm marketing excess, unless he harvests 15 acres or less or has signed an agreement permitting him to produce up to 30 acres of wheat for feed use on the farm.

Wheat produced on a farm on which the wheat acreage is in excess of the allotment is not eligible for price support.

The national average minimum support price for 1960-crop wheat is $1.77 per bushel, which was 75 per cent of parity. The final average support price for the 1960 crop will be 75 per cent of the effective parity as of July 1, 1960, if this is higher.

Secrets Of Charm
by John Robert Powers

It takes astute compromises in color choices to win compliments!

Color Flattery Is Yours
To get the most out of color, both your face and your figure must be flattered. But what do you do if you have a creamy complexion (the opposite of the blue-white variety) that calls for warm, advancing colors to spark its beauty—and a figure that is larger than is to be desired? Those same warm, advancing colors will only exaggerate your figure!

That's a color conundrum that can be solved. Let's consider it today.

Creamy skins look their loveliest against vibrant yellow-reds, golds and yellow-greens. But these colors advance toward you and therefore make whatever they cover loom larger.

Of course, you could bow to your heavy figure and wear dark clothes with bright touches next

Nuclear Studies Are Reappraised

If the Atomic Energy Commission finds courses offered by colleges in nuclear engineering confusing—and it does—it might be asked if the colleges know what they are offering. Currently in the curricula of the nation's schools of higher education are more than 20 graduate courses in nuclear engineering and more than 180 undergraduate courses. Almost all differ from the others.

Officials at the AEC who are responsible for controlling scientific grants made by the nuclear commission have found it impossible to judge the relative merits of such a diversified education spree. They have set up a panel of nuclear experts to evaluate education on the subject and try to set some guide posts for colleges to follow.

Thirty nuclear engineering experts picked by the American Society for Engineering Education and the American Nuclear Society will compose the panel headed by Dr. Glenn Murphy, Iowa State University professor. The group hopes to add a sense of direction to a major field of higher education which presently seems badly splintered.

Nuclear engineering is one of the newest specialties of scientific education, and one which promises to be a major factor in the world now unfolding. It is not surprising that the newness of the subject, the tight secrecy surrounding many phases of it until recently and the scarcity of experts qualified to teach it have compounded the difficulties of getting a well directed program off the ground.

The AEC is interested in setting up standards to prevent the present "wide variation in the level and content of programs in nuclear engineering" which it now has to contend with. Colleges which offer nuclear courses but have admitted difficulty in differentiating between nuclear, mechanical, chemical and electrical engineering will also find a guide book handy to have around.

Deductibles

Tax exemption is a privilege granted organizations which raise funds for charity, education and similar unprofitable enterprises. (The preferred usage is "non-profit" which begs the question.) The concept is that the income tax is collected on money profits, spiritual profits being unmeasurable.

At one stage, the mere assertion of intent was sufficient to make an organization or a Foundation tax exempt. Today the Treasury is more strict, requiring evidence that the association exists for a good purpose and not to give jobs to its organizers and trustees who evade the tax by taking the profits as salaries and expenses. Furthermore, it is essential that the evidence be clear that the organization, whatever its stated purpose, has not been established as an income tax evasion gimmick, as is so often the case. When a Foundation comes into existence which gives evidence that those in control of it, or a number of them, draw off the funds as salaries for themselves, the Treasury is entitled to investigate the bona fides of the operation.

On the other hand, the Treasury sometimes makes distinctions which are political in nature and therefore unfair. For instance, it seems to be that sharp political distinction is made when the Committee of One Million (Against the Admission of Communist China to the United Nations) is refused tax exemption whereas such exemption is granted to the Institute of Pacific Relations.

The Committee of One Million exists to publish educational material in opposition to the admission of Red China into the United Nations. Its officers include a number of distinguished persons.

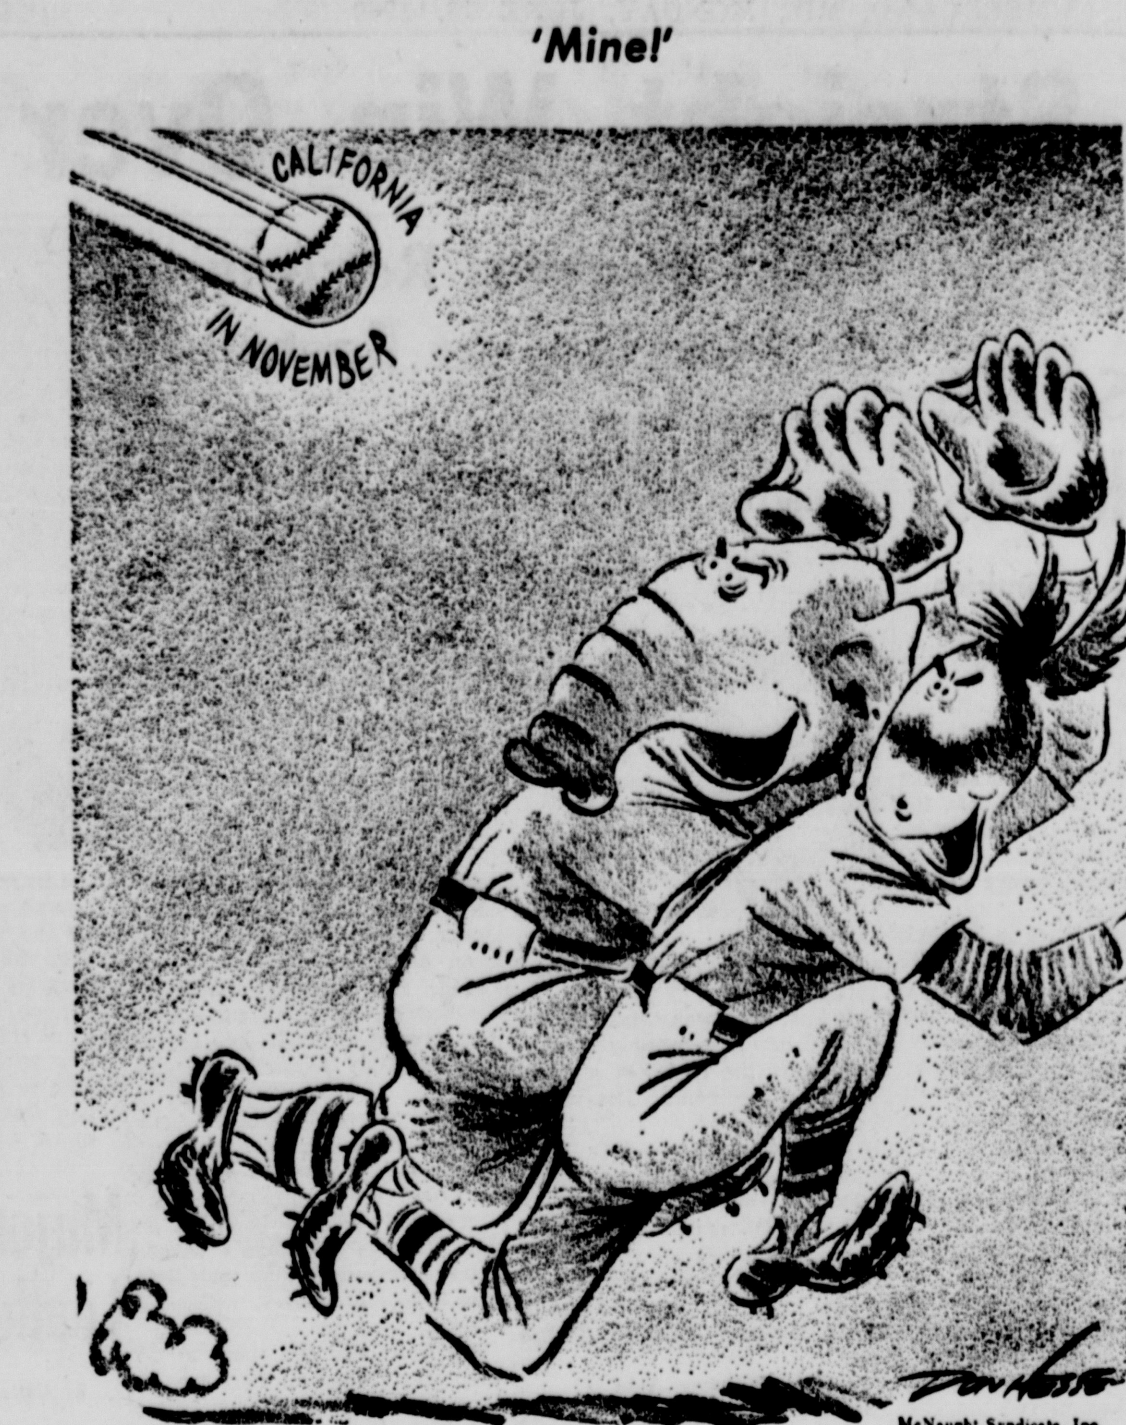

On the other hand, in 1955, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue revoked the tax-exempt privilege of the Institute of Pacific Relations, after hearings before the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, for Communist involvement. On March 31, 1960, the I.P.R.'s tax-exempt privilege was restored. This was done perhaps in the Spirit of Camp David. Will the privilege be revoked now that Camp David has laid its ghost?

In a word, there seems to be no fixed policy except that the Treasury goes easy on Left Wing organizations and is tough on Right Wing organizations or vice versa which is equally unjust. If this view is correct, it means that the Treasury is using the tax-exempt privilege as a political weapon to strengthen organizations which a current administration favors or to weaken and even eliminate organizations which are not favored.

A tax-exempt organization ought to be defined as a charitable or educational body which earns no profit and none of whose officers and directors (except an executive or administrator) draws a salary or has an expense account. When, for instance, a Foundation consists of a few front names but all its other officers draw salaries, have expense accounts, or in any other way enjoy a monetary profit because of its existence, then it requires investigation. Also if money is raised for one purpose and expended for another, the Foundation is a fraud. This obviously is happening to a large number of Foundations, the purposes of which are perverted by the hired staff. The front-runner trustees are usually "great names" busy on a hundred fronts and attending to few.

Heretofore every effort by Congress to investigate Foundations and tax exemptions has failed largely because the very rich and influential Foundations have succeeded in bringing pressure against investigation. Furthermore, many businesses would fall apart if the Foundations which hold their stock were subjected to too much scrutiny. The income tax and the inheritance tax do mischief to family businesses and to smaller enterprises. The only way to keep such businesses intact is to leave their stock to a non-profit making Foundation, which uses the money for good causes if it can find any. The heirs of the founder are usually kept on, working for a substantial salary, on which, of course, they pay income taxes.

The income and inheritance taxes of this country tend toward monopoly. The only way honestly to meet the current tax requirements and to keep some money is to sell out and make a capital gain. Sociologically, this is very bad because it tends to strengthen monopolistic practices. The Department of Justice attempts to balk this process by anti-trust procedures but it has not been successful. One significant result has been the managerial seizure of authority.

The Long-Lasting Effects Of The Steel Strike

By David Lawrence

WASHINGTON — There is something wrong with the business situation. A certain slowness has developed. Explanations are numerous. But perhaps the most significant is the discovery that the steel strike was far more damaging to the American economy than was realized either by the unions or the companies involved.

For the truth is America has not yet recovered from the ill effects of the steel strike, and it may take several months more before there is a balanced situation in the steel industry.

While many of the steel companies have shut down a part of their plants and unemployment has been increased, other companies are finding themselves in the midst of a profit squeeze.

"We realized," said one steel executive, "that the strike was going to have an impact on increasing costs, but we hoped that the union would cooperate to the point where savings could be made to offset the increased costs. Up to date, this has not materialized and it doesn't look to me as though it is going to materialize."

"Will there be a price increase?" the writer asked.

"Well, we will have to just wait and bide our time. Since we have to give a wage increase in December, and since the profit squeeze that we are encountering now is so severe, I don't see how we can stay in business without a price increase."

Discussing the factors that are upsetting the steel industry, including foreign competition, one steel expert pointed out:

"All during the strike, we were receiving reports that foreign companies would not accept business except over a period of two or three years and that they would not furnish steel for a short time. So I am sure there were some long-term commitments made, and this is having an impact right now."

"Then there is the problem of substitutes. Some users of steel found that when they could not get steel, they could use substitutes and do a reasonably good job, perhaps even cheaper. It is not known the extent to which these substitutes have made an inroad on the market for steel."

Perhaps the biggest single factor in the change that has occurred in the steel industry is in relation to inventories. Referring to the accumulation of large inventories prior to the strike, a steel expert said:

"The inventory situation misled us in two respects. The users had more steel during the strike than we thought. Then, when we started up under the Taft-Hartley injunction, the orders poured in and we started off with a bang. Because we had increased our capacity, we got out more steel quicker than ever before in our history, and users bought more than ever. When the settlement came three months later, the buyers of steel figured they were safe for two and a half years and that we had plenty of capacity to produce, so they stopped buying right away.

"Today they are cutting their inventories back not only to where they used to have them, but far lower than they used to maintain. This is because, with the introduction of new electronic computing machines, the users can keep a more accurate record of their inventories and get along with much less. In other words, they can place an order with us and get it in 48 hours. It is the steel companies who are carrying the inventories today, and not the customers. It is a great upheaval in the industry."

Asked when a more normal situation might be expected, here was the answer given:

"We think beginning in August, when the automobile companies come in big for their 1961 models, we will show a pretty good pickup from there on. Now, how long that will last remains to be seen. At least they will buy goods through the spring of 1961. What happens after the first quarter of 1961 is anybody's guess. It all depends on how the rest of the economy is.

"There are two factors that bother us. One is that the high cost of money is keeping our little people from building up inventories, and the other factor is that there is just a slowdown in the economy for some reason. Things are not going at the booming rate that everybody thought they would. Frankly, I wonder if the Federal Reserve Board is taking cognizance of the fact that before long we will have to get our house in order or we will have poor business conditions. They took their first move the other day when they reduced the discount rate to 3 1/2 per cent. This ought to have some good effect."

"Another thing that is hurting the steel business is the oil industry. The oil people are buying very little today. They have had too big inventories before. Then, with the imports of oil and the restrictions on drilling, with the Texas Railroad Commission allowing them to pump only 11 days out of 30 in a month—all this is making it unprofitable for oil companies to do much drilling except abroad, so they are not doing any drilling to speak of in this country. The importation of oil is having an adverse effect."

The steel industry is one of the basic factors in the American economy and, when it is upset, many other industries that are related to steel are similarly affected. The threat of a strike was known for months in advance, and inventories were built up to record heights. Then the inventories had to be absorbed. Today, there is a slowdown due to the fact that the ill effects of the strike have not yet been overcome. That's one reason why business is slower than had been expected.

Now, some of the circles make nice neighborhood parks. Most are adorned with statuary, but no guns.

Rockefeller's Biggest Hurdles Are Ike's Health, His Own Liberalism

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — Republican leaders will tell you privately there are just two hurdles Gov. Nelson Rockefeller has to overcome to get the GOP nomination. One of them is a hurdle never before faced by a presidential candidate. They are:

Hurdle No. 1 — Eisenhower's health. As long as Nixon remains Vice President of the United States, and in a position to become President tomorrow through death, no political boss wants to be caught pushing Rockefeller. A politician lives on patronage and favors. He has to stand in with the man in power. And Nixon could be the most powerful man in America tomorrow.

There have been other vice presidents who aspired to be president, but none who were elected since Millard Fillmore in 1850. That was 110 years ago. The vice presidents who have aspired since then and failed did not have the same hold on the party bosses because the health of their presidents was more certain. This is the first time in history that a president has been as old as Eisenhower and the first time in history that the President has suffered three major illnesses in the White House.

While these are not pleasant matters to review, politicians are prone to take a hard-boiled look at them, and the fear of alienating a man who could be president tomorrow is the biggest hurdle facing Rockefeller. It diminishes, of course, as the convention date approaches.

Hurdle No. 2 — Rockefeller's liberalism. Many GOP bosses regard Nelson as a Republican New Dealer. His forthright statement urging medical help for the aged, Federal aid for education, and more money for defense, confirmed this. To GOP bosses, most of them conservative, this means higher taxes. And a lot of them would rather take a chance with a Democrat whom they can oppose and badger than with a liberal Republican president whom they would have to support.

Privately many GOP leaders will admit that the chances of a Republican victory next fall are not bright with Nixon heading the ticket. But they also admit they would rather lose with Dick than win with Rocky.

Note — Now that Rockefeller has publicly blasted the administration, the chances of Democratic victory are even better. This is what makes Republican leaders especially sore. All the Democrats have to do now is quote back to the Republicans, their own man's statement about our lagging national defense.

Israel's Amateur Actors
When Otto Preminger, the movie producer, was in Jerusalem filming "Exodus," he needed 15,000 extras for a mob scene in which Israelis shout in celebration of the United Nations vote to partition Palestine.

Preminger didn't want to pay $2 per head for 15,000 extras — a total of $30,000. And he wasn't sure he could get that many people out even for $2.

Finally he ran a lottery with the prize 10 airplane fares to New York to see the opening of "Exodus." Enough tickets were sold to pay for the airplane fares, and the drawing for the airplane trips was staged only after the volunteer actors had participated in the shouting scene.

The space was narrow and he jockeyed the car carefully, turning to where a sign on the wall said "Sheriff Hirsch." He got out, a big man with bifocals and gray fedora, brim up, and he walked across the little yard and up the steps into the jail.

Two Negro trustees sat dreaming in the hot sun. They watched him go without watching.

The sheriff walked through the corridor, his breathing more audible than his steps. He turned right and went into the jail reception room. It was Sunday morning and some Christian laymen stood singing psalms with a few prisoners who were trying to get a message to God. The sheriff said hello in the friendly manner of a man who is part public official and part politician.

Sheriff Bill Hirsch picked up his copy of the fat Toledo Blade. The principal keeper said that nothing was new. A plump young woman in a cotton housedress stood apart, holding an infant who dozed. She wore no makeup and she looked pale and her hair was stringy. A little boy pinched the side of her dress. Her husband is doing six months.

The jail is 70-years-old, an ugly pile of stone across the street from the Lucas County Courthouse in Toledo, Ohio. It was built to hold 300 tenants. It has 125. When the iron doors are shut, they clang like the bell in Lloyd's of London when a ship sinks.

The sheriff left with his paper and walked across the hall to his office and, on the far side, knocked on a door. He waited. Then the lock was turned and the door opened. A little man in khaki slacks stood inside. He gave the sheriff a shy glance and said hello. Then he closed the door behind Bill Hirsch and locked it.

This is Stevie. He led the sheriff into the living quarters of the small house which adjoins the jail. Mrs. Hirsch sat in a wing chair, smiling up at her husband. She is a pretty woman, with dark compassionate eyes and white hair with tints of blue. The sheriff kissed his wife and said to read Stevie, a man of about 45, got some tea for Mrs. Hirsch, and looked critically around the living room and the dining room, straightening chairs, flicking imaginary specks of dust from chinaware, and straightening curtains.

He has the world's record for drunkenness. Stevie has been convicted of public intoxication

G. P. writes: Since I've had a heart attack I dream that I'm in danger and wake up with a chest pain. Is this part of the heart condition?

REPLY
This occurs occasionally, especially if the dream is associated with increased pulse rate. Sometimes the sedative given to heart patients will precipitate dreams. Others dream because they are frightened.

HEART OPERATION
R. P. writes: What is meant by an open heart operation?

REPLY
The heart is opened and the defect is corrected under full view of the surgeon. The procedure requires re-routing of the blood around the heart during the few minutes it takes to do the operation. An artificial heart is inserted for this purpose.

IN A GLOW
Mrs. S. writes: My husband says when he enters the door on coming home, my face flushes for a few minutes. I don't feel it. What could be the cause?

REPLY
Love.

To the limit of space questions pertaining to the prevention of diseases will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

TOMORROW: Malaria is down but not out.

The crowd on hand was tremendous. Instead of 15,000 extras, Preminger got 20,000. But he couldn't get them to shout with enough vigor over the simulated UN vote to partition Palestine. However, remembering the 4-to-0 football victory Israel had just scored over the British, he finally instructed his extras:

"Shout as if the Israeli team has just scored the winning goal in that football game."

This got results.

Behind The Scenes
Twelve hours after Gov. Rockefeller blasted Ike's limping defenses and the Madison Avenue technique of "evading strong action with strong slogans," GOP leaders leaving the White House came out with another Madison Avenue statement to cover up lack of strong action. Sen. Everett Dirksen, the GOP leader, solemnly proclaimed that Eisenhower was firmly convinced that "the people in the Pentagon are doing a good job for security."

The Madison Avenue joker in this statement is that the Pentagon people have been squawking the loudest about our lagging defenses and supplied some of the ammunition for Rockefeller's statement. . . . The city of Morgantown, located in the allegedly "dying" state of West Virginia, showed surprising life last week when it voted a bond issue by 68 per cent for a new airport to land patients at the most modern medical and dental college in the east, built by the University of West Virginia. . . . Bill Doherty, able boss of the AFL-CIO Letter Carriers Union, contends that a postal pay raise (now a hot issue in Congress) is needed to halt the enormous turnover of post office personnel, biggest in the government. In Chicago more postal workers quit their jobs in April, 1960, due to low pay, than the number of letter carriers who resigned in all the 48 states in 1958.

Jim Bishop: Reporter

By Jim Bishop

118 times. He has been arrested 200 times. Many years ago, so the story goes, Stevie got married.

It lasted a few months. No one knows what happened, but the silent little man has been drinking ever since.

Most of his time has been spent as a trustee. He began to live as a prisoner, with the Hirsch family 27 years ago. The Hirschs are Jews, and live up to the strict precepts of their faith. Still, Mrs. Hirsch insists that "Stevie brought my children up." There are three daughters, all married now, and nine grandchildren, but none of them can remember back to a time when Stevie wasn't around the house.

There is liquor in the Hirsch house at all times. Stevie knows where it is. In over a quarter of a century, he has never touched a drink. The moment his sentence is up, he looks around the house, sets the bar mitzvah photos of two grandsons on the mantelpiece, and leaves in silence.

The sheriff phones the police, phones the judges. "Stevie is out," he says sadly. "He will start drinking in an hour or so. I don't want him hurt. When he goes too far, pick him up and phone me. Mrs. Hirsch or I will be waiting. I would like the judge to give him 90 days and $100 fine, which can be paid off at the rate of $3 for each day served."

The judges are kind when Stevie comes up for trial. They do not want to embarrass him. They nod, smile a little greeting, and say: "Stevie, how do you plead?" He whispers: "Guilty." They pass sentence and the police drive him directly to the jail and, when he is completely sober, he is sent across the hall to the Hirsch home. Once, when Mrs. Hirsch said she was ashamed of him, he broke down sobbing. "Don't talk like that," he said. "You're the only mother I ever had and you have no right to talk to me like that."

Recently, he was silent all day. He heard that a woman had come to the jail to complain that two young boys had cut her off at high speed on Monroe Street. By the time the police closed in on them, the young boys had driven the car, at 80, against a stone wall. They were dead. Stevie heard the cops say that the kids had been drinking. . . .

Enzymes: Missing Link In Body's Laboratory

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

Some disorders are easy to explain, especially when they are caused by germs that are passed along in well known ways, producing common symptoms. But a disease due to chemical changes or disturbances in enzymes is more complex. Our understanding of biochemical defects of this nature is growing as medicine makes more progress in these fields.

Inborn errors of metabolism belong in this category. This origin of certain childhood conditions was described in 1908 but was so complicated it took 50 years for physicians to understand it. These enzyme deficiencies may prove to be the solution to some types of mental retardation in children as well as certain intellectual, emotional, and nerve disorders. Formerly many of these defects were blamed on heredity, birth injuries, or inadequacies of the parents.

The body is a chemical laboratory. For the brain to develop and function properly, several chemicals get together to produce the desired effect. If one of the important ingredients is lacking, or one step in the process fails, even momentarily, that part of the brain may not develop or function properly even though the organ itself is otherwise perfect.

Phenylketonuria is one of these errors of metabolism. Certain mentally retarded children were found to have an excess of certain chemicals in the urine because of an overabundance in the blood. Improvements occur when the imbalance is corrected with medication and diet during the first five years of life. Failure to recognize and treat the condition results in progressive mental and neurological changes.

"Will there be a price increase?" the writer asked. "Well, we will have to just wait and bide our time. Since we have to give a wage increase in December, and since the profit squeeze that we are encountering now is so severe, I don't see how we can stay in business without a price increase."

Discussing the factors that are upsetting the steel industry, including foreign competition, one steel expert pointed out:

"All during the strike, we were receiving reports that foreign companies would not accept business except over a period of two or three years and that they would not furnish steel for a short time. So I am sure there were some long-term commitments made, and this is having an impact right now."

"Then there is the problem of substitutes. Some users of steel found that when they could not get steel, they could use substitutes and do a reasonably good job, perhaps even cheaper. It is not known the extent to which these substitutes have made an inroad on the market for steel." Perhaps the biggest single factor in the change that has occurred in the steel industry is in relation to inventories. Referring to the accumulation of large inventories prior to the strike, a steel expert said:

"The inventory situation misled us in two respects. The users had more steel during the strike than we thought. Then, when we started up under the Taft-Hartley injunction, the orders poured in and we started off with a bang. Because we had increased our capacity, we got out more steel quicker than ever before in our history, and users bought more than ever. When the settlement came three months later, the buyers of steel figured they were safe for two and a half years and that we had plenty of capacity to produce, so they stopped buying right away."

"Today they are cutting their inventories back not only to where they used to have them, but far lower than they used to maintain. This is because, with the introduction of new electronic computing machines, the users can keep a more accurate record of their inventories and get along with much less. In other words, they can place an order with us and get it in 48 hours. It is the steel companies who are carrying the inventories today, and not the customers. It is a great upheaval in the industry."

Asked when a more normal situation might be expected, here was the answer given: "We think beginning in August, when the automobile companies

Inside Washington

By Henry Cathcart

PROBLEMS OF TRAFFIC — Innumerable tourists and Washington residents alike have thought harsh words about the Capital's many confusing traffic circles. Most of them don't know it, but they're damning the memory of a Frenchman, Pierre Charles L'Enfant, who laid out the plan for Washington in 1791.

To the usual array of streets and avenues running north and south, and east and west, L'Enfant added diagonal streets. As a result as many as eight streams of traffic converge on a single traffic circle and the rush of vehicles must find their way onto and off the circular drives.

This causes confusion, wrinkled fenders, frayed nerves — and sometimes downright hysteria. If you think it's tough on the drivers, you should witness the plight of some pedestrians. Some of the circles have a profusion of the usual kind of traffic lights supplemented with "walk" and "don't walk" neon signs. Trouble is that you can't always walk on the green signal, or can walk only part way across the traffic lane to an island where you must wait further instructions.

Of course, L'Enfant could not envision the muddy marshland that was the site of the capital city as the multi-million metropolis it has become. However, historians believe he wouldn't have cared much, anyway. He was more concerned with the beauty of the broad, tree-lined avenues, and with the military defense of the city than he was with future traffic problems.

The circles were put there to be converted into forts and gun emplacements in time of attack. The idea was that the embattled soldiers would be able to fire at enemy forces coming down the converging streets and avenues, permitting a small force to hold off a large army.

Now, some of the circles make nice neighborhood parks. Most are adorned with statuary, but no guns.

Enzymes: Missing Link In Body's Laboratory

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

Some disorders are easy to explain, especially when they are caused by germs that are passed along in well known ways, producing common symptoms. But a disease due to chemical changes or disturbances in enzymes is more complex. Our understanding of biochemical defects of this nature is growing as medicine makes more progress in these fields.

Inborn errors of metabolism belong in this category. This origin of certain childhood conditions was described in 1908 but was so complicated it took 50 years for physicians to understand it. These enzyme deficiencies may prove to be the solution to some types of mental retardation in children as well as certain intellectual, emotional, and nerve disorders. Formerly many of these defects were blamed on heredity, birth injuries, or inadequacies of the parents.

The body is a chemical laboratory. For the brain to develop and function properly, several chemicals get together to produce the desired effect. If one of the important ingredients is lacking, or one step in the process fails, even momentarily, that part of the brain may not develop or function properly even though the organ itself is otherwise perfect.

Phenylketonuria is one of these errors of metabolism. Certain mentally retarded children were found to have an excess of certain chemicals in the urine because of an overabundance in the blood. Improvements occur when the imbalance is corrected with medication and diet during the first five years of life. Failure to recognize and treat the condition results in progressive mental and neurological changes.

Cornelia Otis Skinner has a well-nursed grievance against "those wretched unknowns who are responsible for American packaging."

She calls them "those wizards of cardboard, waxed paper, cellophane, tape with red tabs saying 'Pull,' red dots saying 'Push,' semi-perforated hyphen lines saying 'Open here,' who are responsible for causing our consumer goods to reach us in boxes, containers, wrappers, and cartons that are not only increasingly hideous, but increasingly unopenable."

Wow! Any member of the packaging fraternity care to rebut the angry Miss Skinner?

Rockefeller's Biggest Hurdles Are Ike's Health, His Own Liberalism

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — Republican leaders will tell you privately there are just two hurdles Gov. Nelson Rockefeller has to overcome to get the GOP nomination. One of them is a hurdle never before faced by a presidential candidate. They are:

Hurdle No. 1 — Eisenhower's health. As long as Nixon remains Vice President of the United States, and in a position to become President tomorrow through death, no political boss wants to be caught pushing Rockefeller. A politician lives on patronage and favors. He has to stand in with the man in power. And Nixon could be the most powerful man in America tomorrow.

There have been other vice presidents who have aspired to be president, but none who were elected since Millard Fillmore in 1850. That was 110 years ago. The vice presidents who have aspired since then and failed did not have the same hold on the party bosses because the health of their presidents was more certain. This is the first time in history that a president has been as old as Eisenhower and the first time in history that the President has suffered three major illnesses in the White House.

While these are not pleasant matters to review, politicians are prone to take a hard-boiled look at them, and the fear of alienating a man who could be president tomorrow is the biggest hurdle facing Rockefeller. It diminishes ishes, of course, as the convention date approaches.

Hurdle No. 2 — Rockefeller's liberalism. Many GOP bosses regard Nelson as a Republican New Dealer. His forthright statement urging medical help for the aged, Federal aid for education, and more money for defense, confirmed this. To GOP bosses, most of them conservative, this means higher taxes. And a lot of them would rather take a chance with a Democrat whom they can oppose and badger than with a liberal Republican president whom they would have to support.

Privately many GOP leaders will admit that the chances of a Republican victory next fall are not bright with Nixon heading the ticket. But they also admit they would rather lose with Dick than win with Rocky.

Note — Now that Rockefeller has publicly blasted the administration, the chances of Democratic victory are even better. This is what makes Republican leaders especially sore. All the Democrats have to do now is quote back to the Republicans, their own man's statement about our lagging national defense.

Israel's Amateur Actors

When Otto Preminger, the movie producer, was in Jerusalem filming "Exodus," he needed 15,000 extras for a mob scene in which Israelis shout in celebration of the United Nations vote to partition Palestine.

Preminger didn't want to pay $2 per head for 15,000 extras — a total of $30,000. And he wasn't sure he could get that many people out even for $2.

Finally he ran a lottery with the prize 10 airplane fares to New York to see the opening of "Exodus." Enough tickets were sold to pay for the airplane fares, and the drawing for the airplane trips was staged only after the volunteer actors had participated in the shouting scene.

The crowd on hand was tremendous. Instead of 15,000 extras, Preminger got 20,000. But he couldn't get them to shout with enough vigor over the simulated UN vote to partition Palestine. However, remembering the 4-to-0 football victory Israel had just scored over the British, he finally instructed his extras:

"Shout as if the Israeli team has just scored the winning goal in that football game."

This got results.

Behind The Scenes

Twelve hours after Gov. Rockefeller blasted Ike's limping defenses and the Madison Avenue technique of "evading strong action with strong slogans," GOP leaders leaving the White House came out with another Madison Avenue statement to cover up lack of strong action. Sen. Everett Dirksen, the GOP leader, solemnly proclaimed that Eisenhower was firmly convinced that "the people in the Pentagon are doing a good job for security."

The Madison Avenue joker in this statement is that the Pentagon people have been squawking the loudest about our lagging defenses and supplied some of the ammunition for Rockefeller's statement. The city of Morgantown, located in the allegedly "dying" state of West Virginia, showed surprising life last week when it voted a bond issue by 68 per cent for a new airport to land patients at the most modern medical and dental college in the east, built by the University of West Virginia. Bill Doherty, able boss of the AFL-CIO Letter Carriers Union, contends that a postal pay raise (now a hot issue in Congress) is needed to halt the enormous turnover of post office personnel, biggest in the government. In Chicago more postal workers quit their jobs in April, 1960, due to low pay, than the number of letter carriers who resigned in all the 48 states in 1958.

Jim Bishop: Reporter

By Jim Bishop

The space was narrow and he jockeyed the car carefully, turning to where a sign on the wall said "Sheriff Hirsch."

He got out, a big man with bifocals and gray fedora, brim up, and he walked across the little yard and up the steps into the jail. Two Negro trustees sat dreaming in the hot sun. They watched him go without watching.

The sheriff walked through the corridor, his breathing more audible than his steps. He turned right and went into the jail reception room. It was Sunday morning and some Christian laymen stood singing psalms with a few prisoners who were trying to get a message to God. The sheriff said hello in the friendly manner of a man who is part public official and part politician.

Sheriff Bill Hirsch picked up his copy of the fat Toledo Blade. The principal keeper said that nothing was new. A plump young woman in a cotton housedress stood apart, holding an infant who dozed. She wore no makeup and she looked pale and her hair was stringy. A little boy pinched the side of her dress. Her husband is doing six months.

The jail is 70-years-old, an ugly pile of stone across the street from the Lucas County Courthouse in Toledo, Ohio. It has 125. When the iron doors are shut, they clang like the bell in Lloyd's of London when a ship sinks.

The sheriff left with his paper and walked across the hall to his office and, on the far side, knocked on a door. He waited. The lock was turned and the door opened. A little man in khaki slacks stood inside. He gave the sheriff a shy glance and said hello. Then he closed the door behind Bill Hirsch and locked it.

This is Stevie. He led the sheriff into the living quarters of the small house which adjoins the jail. Mrs. Hirsch sat in a wing chair, smiling up at her husband. She is a pretty woman, with dark compassionate eyes and white hair with tints of blue. The sheriff kissed his wife and said to read, Stevie, a man of about 45, got some tea for Mrs. Hirsch, and looked critically around the living room and the dining room, straightening chairs, flicking imaginary specks of dust from chinaware, and straightening curtains.

He has the world's record for drunkenness. Stevie has been convicted of public intoxication

118 times. He has been arrested 200 times. Many years ago, so the story goes, Stevie got married.

It lasted a few months. No one knows what happened, but the silent little man has been drinking ever since.

Most of his time has been spent as a trustee. He began to live as a prisoner, with the Hirsch family 27 years ago. The Hirschs are Jews, and live up to the strict precepts of their faith. Still, Mrs. Hirsch insists that "Stevie brought my children up." There are three daughters, all married now, and nine grandchildren, but none of them can remember back to a time when Stevie wasn't around the house.

There is liquor in the Hirsch house at all times. Stevie knows where it is. In over a quarter of a century, he has never touched a drink. The moment his sentence is up, he looks around the house, sets the bar mitzvah photos of two grandsons on the mantelpiece, and leaves in silence.

The sheriff phones the police, phones the judges. "Stevie is out," he says sadly. "He will start drinking in an hour or so. I don't want him hurt. When he goes too far, pick him up and phone me. Mrs. Hirsch or I will be waiting. I would like the judge to give him 90 days and $100 fine, which can be paid off at the rate of $3 for each day served."

The judges are kind when Stevie comes up for trial. They do not want to embarrass him. They nod, smile a little greeting, and say: "Stevie, how do you plead?" He whispers: "Guilty." They pass sentence and the police drive him directly to the jail and, when he is completely sober, he is sent across the hall to the Hirsch home. Once, when Mrs. Hirsch said she was ashamed of him, he broke down sobbing. "Don't talk like that," he said. "You're the only mother I ever had and you have no right to talk to me like that."

Recently, he was silent all day. He heard that a woman had come to the jail to complain that two young boys had cut her off at high speed on Monroe Street. By the time the police closed in on them, the young boys had driven the car, at 80, against a stone wall. They were dead. Stevie heard the cops say that the kids had been drinking . . .

Broglio Takes 2nd, 5-2; 29,605 Attend Games In St. Louis

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Ernie Broglio pitched the St. Louis Cardinals to a 5-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates in the second game of a doubleheader Sunday after the leaders won the opener, 15-3.

A crowd of 29,605 saw the twin bill, largest here since Memorial Day, 1958, when 30,461 persons filled Busch Stadium.

By taking the second game, the Cardinals won the series, 3-1, and now have a 19-8 home record.

Broglio needed help from Lindy McDaniel in the ninth inning.

Broglio had given up successive singles to Gino Cimoli and Hal W. Smith opening the inning when McDaniel came in.

Don Hoak then grounded into a double play and Bill Mazeroski was out on an easy roller to Ken Boyer to preserve Broglio's third victory against two defeats.

The Cardinals hopped on their old teammate Wilmer Mizell for three runs in the first two innings, and Broglio drove in one of these with a single. Mizell went off trailing, 3-0, for pinch-hitter Smokey Burgess in the first.

Burgess drove in the two Pirate runs with a double.

Joe Cunningham hit his second home run of the season to lead off for the Cardinals in the sixth inning. In the first game, Dick Stuart hit two homers and Hoak slammed one as the Pirates unleashed a 23 hit attack. Stuart, Dick Groat and Burgess accounted for 13 hits, with Stuart getting five out of six and the others four apiece.

Pinky Higgins Returns As Manager At Boston

Succeeds Jurgens Who Had Replaced Him Last Summer

BOSTON (AP)—Michael Francis (Pinky) Higgins Sunday returned as field manager of the Boston Red Sox, succeeding Billy Jurgens who had replaced him last summer.

The announcement from owner Tom Yawkey came two hours after the last place Boston club defeated Chicago 4-1.

Higgins, who was taken off the job last July "regrettably" comes back under the terms of a "gentlemen's agreement." The salary was not revealed.

Giants Clobber Milwaukee, 16-7, 10 Hurlers Used

Battle Lasts 3:52; Sets N.L. Record

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — San Francisco Giant sluggers, featuring Willie McCovey's pinch-hit grand slam homer, pounded five Milwaukee pitchers for 18 hits and a 16-7 victory.

It took three hours and 52 minutes for the battle, which set a new National League record for a nine inning game. The old mark was three hours and 50 minutes. The 3:52 tied the American League record.

In the wind-blown battle 10 pitchers were used, with Billy Loes, who hurled only one inning, getting credit for his third victory against one defeat.

The erratic Milwaukee defense helped San Francisco along with five errors. The pitchers chipped in with four wild pitches and one hit batsman plus eight walks.

The Giants salted the game away in the wild seventh inning scoring when six runs crossed the plate. The big blow was McCovey's bases-loaded smash that went high in the air and looked like it would be caught in short right, but a jet stream caught it and carried it out of the park.

The Giant bats broke out all over. Catcher Bob Schmidt got four for four, including two doubles. Orlando Cepeda had two doubles and drove in three runs. Willie Mays had a single and two doubles.

Milwaukee batted out 13 hits, Joe Adcock had a triple that drove in two runs in the seventh and three singles. Hank Aaron hit two doubles, a home run, and scored four runs.

Aaron's homer, his 13th of the year, came in the ninth with two away and the bases empty.

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This letter is being written by six junior high school baseball players. We have plenty of trouble. I was the pitcher. Red was the batter. Red belted the ball right through a big plate glass dining-room window.

Do you think the pitcher should help the batter pay for the window? Should the whole team buy a new window? Should the man who owns the window say to the kids, "I'm willing to be a good sport and forget it because I was young once myself?"

Also, who should buy a new broken window? The man who owns the broken window will not give it back. He says anything that falls into his living room belongs to him.

Please help us, Ann Landers. We can't afford a lawyer.

—BLUE SOX

DEAR BLUE SOX: It would be very brotherly, indeed, if the whole team pitched in to help the batter pay for the window. Especially the pitcher—on account his earned-run average must have soared following such a stupendous blow.

The man who was young once himself will surely give the ball back when learns that you little gentlemen are making plans to pay for the window.

DEAR ANN: My wife is a wonderful woman and a fine mother, but the feeling I once had for her is gone. I can't explain it.

I try to be loving and attentive but it's hard work. I've fallen in love with another woman. She's married, too, and her husband is a close friend of mine and a great guy.

My new love and I steal an hour or two together whenever we can. We hate sneaking but there's no other way. She has three children. I have four. No one suspects and we wonder how much longer we can hide.

As if I haven't suffered enough torment and guilt, last week was the crowning blow. I was elected by our church club as "Father of the Year." Soon I'll have to sit through a banquet and accept the award. I'm afraid I'll die of a heart attack at the table. I can't refuse to accept the honor without revealing myself. Please tell me what to do. For obvious reasons I can't seek guidance elsewhere.

—PHONY OF THE YEAR

DEAR PHONY: You know what to do but you've written to me because you need someone to tell you to go ahead and do it. There is only one decent, moral, responsible course of action open to you. Accept the honor and make up your mind that you're going to live up to it.

There are seven children. "A wonderful woman" and "a great guy" who must be considered. There can be no happiness for you if you throw them to the wolves.

DEAR ANN: I read your advice to a student who complained because the teachers favored pretty girls and handsome boys, while the serious students with less than shining personalities were lucky to get the grades they earned.

You said personality alone won't work if you can't deliver the goods but you added, "a little banana oil is an effective lubricant for oiling the machinery of human relations."

What do you suggest when there's a clash of personalities and you just can't stand the professor? My papers added up to a 97 average but he gave me a C for the course. Is this fair?

—U OF L

DEAR U: Of course not. But who said life was always fair? If you can't stand the professor the feeling is probably mutual. You're bound to encounter additional personality conflicts throughout your life. The trick is to keep them at a minimum—or suffer the consequences.

A Dodge Royal hardtop 2 door that reflects the good car given it in the few thousand miles it has been driven. Light green and white, a refreshing color combination for the exterior. The same combination of color for the spotless interior of vinyl and fabric.
Thick green floor carpets and whitewall tires complete the luxury appearance. The D-500 engine and torque-flite transmission make a great team for ease of steering. Power brakes, power steering, tinted glass. Of course there's a heater, radio, and numerous small accessories. Be sure to see and drive this like-new car.

Progress Noted On Site For New PE Plant

The Potomac Edison Company's efforts to secure a suitable site for the possible location of a power plant in the future continued this month at Black Oak.

At the Potomac River site about 14 miles south of Cumberland, PE has purchased nearly 600 acres of land and has under option an additional 600 acres.

A one-foot contour survey has been completed on about one-half of the acreage, and the remainder of the area will be similarly surveyed in the future.

Exploratory core drillings were completed last month at Black Oak. Drillings were made in six areas, and apparently solid rock foundation, which would be suitable for construction of a power plant, was struck some 38 feet below the surface. Core samples were taken 20 feet into this rock foundation for testing.

Potomac Edison has already received a permit from the state of Maryland to build a dam across the Potomac at Black Oak. The dam, which would be no more than 15 feet high, would be used to provide a pool for the intake of the power station. The state has also granted permission to use water from the river for supplying steam condenser cooling water.

Fort Hill Graduate Gets AF Academy Scholarship

Ronald Growden, honor graduate at Fort Hill High School, son of Mrs. Margaret Growden, Bedford Road, has received a presidential appointment to the Air Force Academy.

Interested in an Air Force career, Growden had made application for appointment to the Academy through the various methods of obtaining an assignment. He qualified on the basis of high scholastic standing, character, leadership characteristics, physical condition, aptitude and general ability.

In the category from which he was selected, only 10 from the entire United States can be given scholarships each year.

Ronald is a son of the late Vernon Growden, who was killed on May 2, 1945, in Czechoslovakia just days before the end of World War II. He was fighting with the Third Army Infantry.

Under the several categories of appointment to the Air Force Academy, the President can make 10 appointments of sons of men killed in action. It was under this grouping that Growden qualified and was appointed.

There were several hundred applicants from all parts of the country. Growden said he was assisted in his efforts by Rep. John R. Foley.

At Fort Hill he was known for his scholastic ability and his interest in many extracurricular activities. He was a member of the Honor Society, Thespians, Hi-Y Choir, and is interested in vocal and instrumental music. He wrote the Fort Hill column for the Sunday Times.

On Saturday Ronald will leave here with a group of 30 Fort Hill juniors and seniors to attend the National Thespian Conference at the University of Indiana at Bloomington, Ind. The Fort Hill Thespian staff has been invited to conduct a formal initiation ceremony as part of the national conference. The convention ends on June 25, and Growden will proceed immediately to the Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, Colo., where he must report on June 27.

The scholarship is for the full four-year period at the Academy. Upon graduation, cadets receive degrees and are commissioned as second lieutenants in the Air Force. He hopes to proceed from there to a pilot training school, as he is interested in flying.

Everywhere the Chilean people are working desperately to survive and to begin to rebuild their shattered homes and towns, according to Mrs. Lindsay who has received notification from area headquarters asking Cumberlanders to join with the nation in aiding the Chilean people.

Statistics gathered by the Red Cross show that more than 4,000 are dead or missing, more than 250,000 homeless and more than 50,000 homes destroyed or damaged so that they are uninhabitable.

Ample supplies of clothing have been procured for the distressed people, according to Mrs. Lindsay, who said relief materials weighing over 1,700 tons have been sent to Chile by private agencies. The materials include clothing, medical, health and sanitation supplies, foodstuffs, building materials and implements to help the victims rebuild.

Prompted by the desperate plight of the thousands of Chilean earthquake victims, many welfare organizations, churches, and other groups have joined with the Red Cross in the gigantic task of meeting the urgent disaster needs of the people.

Richard Tomlin, assistant director of disaster services for the Eastern area, who was guest speaker here during the chapter's recent annual meeting, has been sent to Santiago to join other RC disaster specialists who are working with the Chilean RC Society.

Habeeb Will Move Shop This Week

An old, established downtown business will close its doors on North Mechanic Street this week and move to a new location on Baltimore Pike outside the city limits, with more modern service and facilities.

Edward Habeeb, who has operated Habeeb Flower Shop at 26 North Mechanic Street since 1919, ends 41 years of operation in the city, but will continue his flower business at the Baltimore Pike location.

Mr. Habeeb came to Cumberland in 1919 and in September of that year purchased the North Mechanic Street building. He opened a flower shop and confectionery. He came here from Piedmont, W. Va., where he had been employed by his uncle George Habeeb for about 18 months, in the confectionery business.

A native of Beirut, Lebanon, Mr. Habeeb had come to this country in May 1913. He was naturalized in 1920. Always interested in flowers and plants, he made a study of the florist business and developed his clientele so rapidly, he gave up the confectionery and concentrated on flowers.

In September 1939, he bought the Pleasant Valley Inn structure, sometimes referred to as the Six Mile House East, and sometimes called the Stage Coach Inn.

He already had constructed and had in operation two large greenhouses across the highway from the inn, which he occupies as a residence.

His greenhouses are being replaced by a new and modern greenhouse closer to the old inn, and the new installation will be completely up to date. He will have a sales room and other accommodations for his clientele and will also raise house and garden plants and cut flowers in all varieties.

Progress Noted On Site For New PE Plant

The Potomac Edison Company's efforts to secure a suitable site for the possible location of a power plant in the future continued this month at Black Oak.

At the Potomac River site about 14 miles south of Cumberland, PE has purchased nearly 600 acres of land and has under option an additional 600 acres.

A one-foot contour survey has been completed on about one-half of the acreage, and the remainder of the area will be similarly surveyed in the future.

Exploratory core drillings were completed last month at Black Oak. Drillings were made in six areas, and apparently solid rock foundation, which would be suitable for construction of a power plant, was struck some 38 feet below the surface. Core samples were taken 20 feet into this rock foundation for testing.

Potomac Edison has already received a permit from the state of Maryland to build a dam across the Potomac at Black Oak. The dam, which would be no more than 15 feet high, would be used to provide a pool for the intake of the power station. The state has also granted permission to use water from the river for supplying steam condenser cooling water.

Fort Hill Graduate Gets AF Academy Scholarship

Ronald Growden, honor graduate at Fort Hill High School, son of Mrs. Margaret Growden, Bedford Road, has received a presidential appointment to the Air Force Academy.

Interested in an Air Force career, Growden had made application for appointment to the Academy through the various methods of obtaining an assignment. He qualified on the basis of high scholastic standing, character, leadership characteristics, physical condition, aptitude and general ability.

In the category from which he was selected, only 10 from the entire United States can be given scholarships each year.

Ronald is a son of the late Vernon Growden, who was killed on May 2, 1945, in Czechoslovakia just days before the end of World War II. He was fighting with the Third Army Infantry.

Under the several categories of appointment to the Air Force Academy, the President can make 10 appointments of sons of men killed in action. It was under this grouping that Growden qualified and was appointed. There were several hundred applicants from all parts of the country. Growden said he was assisted in his efforts by Rep. John R. Foley.

At Fort Hill he was known for his scholastic ability and his interest in many extracurricular activities. He was a member of the Honor Society, Thespians, Hi-Y Choir, and is interested in vocal and instrumental music. He wrote the Fort Hill column for the Sunday Times.

On Saturday Ronald will leave here with a group of 30 Fort Hill juniors and seniors to attend the National Thespian Conference at the University of Indiana at Bloomington, Ind. The Fort Hill Thespian staff has been invited to conduct a formal initiation ceremony as part of the national conference. The convention ends on June 25, and Growden will proceed immediately to the Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, Colo., where he must report on June 27.

The scholarship is for the full four-year period at the Academy. Upon graduation, cadets receive degrees and are commissioned as second lieutenants in the Air Force. He hopes to proceed from there to a pilot training school, as he is interested in flying.

Woman Hurt In One-Car Crash Here

A 35-year-old local woman was hospitalized early yesterday morning with injuries sustained in a rather spectacular one-car accident on Maryland Route 53 (Winchester Road) about a half mile south of LaVale.

June L. Scarpell of Winchester Road suffered a dislocated left hip, abrasions and possible internal injuries, police reported. Attaches at Memorial Hospital said the woman was in "good" condition.

Driver of the car was Ronald D. Green, 20, of Barton, who was not injured. Police said the accident occurred about 5 a.m. Green, who was driving the sedan south on the highway, failed to negotiate a slight left curve, crossed over the center of the highway and struck some mail boxes which are parallel to the northbound lane of traffic.

The vehicle continued on, jumped a bridge abutment and landed partially on its left side. The injured woman was taken to the hospital in the State Police ambulance.

Trooper Joseph Helmstetter has not filed charges.

Chilean Relief Funds Urged By Red Cross Here

Checks May Be Sent To Local Office

In view of continuing hardship in Valdivia, Chile, reeling from the recent earthquakes and tidal waves, the Allegany County Chapter of the Red Cross is putting out an appeal for contributions from residents of Cumberland and area.

Mrs. Sara G. Lindsay, executive secretary of the chapter, said that a number of churches made appeals. The members of Kingsley Methodist Church, she said, contributed to the cause and a check has been sent to the local office.

In the general appeal, the Red Cross is seeking money from residents, who are asked to mail in or bring in a check marked for "Chilean Relief."

Everywhere the Chilean people are working desperately to survive and to begin to rebuild their shattered homes and towns, according to Mrs. Lindsay who has received notification from area headquarters asking Cumberlanders to join with the nation in aiding the Chilean people.

Statistics gathered by the Red Cross show that more than 4,000 are dead or missing, more than 250,000 homeless and more than 50,000 homes destroyed or damaged so that they are uninhabitable.

Ample supplies of clothing have been procured for the distressed people, according to Mrs. Lindsay, who said relief materials weighing over 1,700 tons have been sped to Chile by private agencies. The materials include clothing, medical, health and sanitation supplies, foodstuffs, building materials and implements to help the victims rebuild.

Prompted by the desperate plight of the thousands of Chilean earthquake victims, many welfare organizations, churches, and other groups have joined with the Red Cross in the gigantic task of meeting the urgent disaster needs of the people.

Richard Tomlin, assistant director of disaster services for the Eastern area, who was guest speaker here during the chapter's recent annual meeting, has been sent to Santiago to join other RC disaster specialists who are working with the Chilean RC Society.
